REPORT

Seminar by the International Institute of Islamic Banking and Finance (IIBF) on 9th August, 2012

The 3rd IIBF seminar series was held on Thursday 9th August, 2012. The title of the paper, which was presented by Dr. Nasiru A. Ahmad, was “Islamic Banking in the Context of Nigerian Laws.”

The paper argued that although Islamic Banking business has not been categorically referred to by the Nigerian Laws, it is quite permissible from the provisions of the 1999 Constitution and Banks and other Financial Institutions Act (BOFIA) 1991. With regards to the Constitution it enshrines religious freedom which guarantees every Nigerian the right to enjoy his religion in practice, worship and observance either alone or in community with others. On this ground, it is in the enjoyment of religious input that Muslims can practice a banking system in consonance with the dictates of their religion. The paper further argued that section 9 of BOFIA listed “profit and loss sharing bank” which is akin to Islamic bank.

The paper made a serious case for the review of the relevant Banking Laws in order to fully accommodate the peculiarities of Islamic Banking and to add jurisdiction to the Sharia Court of Appeal so that it can competently hear and determine all issues relating to Islamic Banking business.

The issues addressed by the paper generated serious discussion at the seminar, as a result of which the following resolutions were arrived at:

- That the IIBF and concerned individuals and group are requested to pressure for the review of Nigerian Banking Laws in order to make adequate and clear provisions on Islamic banking.
- That in order to enjoy the benefits of Islamic banking, (particularly the avoidance of ribah (interest) and economic advancements through participatory investments), it is the duty of every one to patronize the newly established Jaiz Bank.
